PLAGUE DEPARTMENT. 1470

Sir,

I have the honor to report for the information of Govt. that on receipt of a petition from some of the residents of Chennapatna where rats have been dying recently and a few cases of plague occurred, I deputed Assistant Surgeon Mr. G.S. David, District Medical and San:Officer Bangalore, to inoculate the people of Chennapatna with Anti-plague vaccine and that officer now reports that between the 7th and the 12th. September 1907, he has inoculated 661 persons in all, i.e., Males 239, Females 142, Boys 165 and Girls 115. About 100 persons got themselves inoculated at first voluntarily and the rest were done after persuading from house to house. Mahomedans were, as a rule, willing to get themselves protected by inoculation while Hindus had to be persuaded. This is the first instance after inoculation against plague had got into disfavor owing to the Kalkoval disaster in which the masses have shown their appreciation of its benefits and sought it voluntarily, and it illustrates the fact that our trouble lies with the educated classes rather than the uneducated. It is reported that
